Father Belford, Whose Church Was Robbed, Says They Did Nothing.

Latter Notified Priest He Had Property That Might Have Been Stolen.

The Detective Bureau does not fare very well at the hands of the Rev. John L. Belford, rector of the Roman Catholic Church of the Nativity, at Classon avenue and Madison street, Brooklyn, who devotes a large amount of space in the current issue of his parish paper, The Mentor, to the recent robbery in the hurch. Father Belford, writing his article in Father Beliord, writing his article in a series of questions and answers, de-clares that most of the stolen property had been recovered, but not with the aid of the police headquarters, which, he says, did nothing when a dealer into whose hands the property came notified them that he had it. "Did they do any harm?"

"They did. They broke open everything that was locked and they ruined a part of one of the altars."

"No; they tried to open it, but, fortunately, we have a burglarproof safe on which they could make no impression."

on which they could make no impression."

"How did they get in?"

"Probably by the door."

"Did you hear them?"

"No; neither did we see them. They were not at all polite. They neither called on or left a card. Their work is the only evidence of their visit."

"Do you suspect anyone?"

"Yes; we have very positive suspicion of a red headed gentleman whose name we have given again and again to the police. He has robbed our church several times, but we have never been fortunate enough to catch him with the goods. No, his name is not Hylan. It is Richard, but not Enright."

"What will you do if you catch him?"

"It will depend on circumstances. Probably we shall do what we can to induce some court to send him to that famous town where the birds sing twice."

"Do you blame the police?"

"Not at all. The police are as eager to prevent crime as we are and they are doing all they can to protect our property.

"We may add a word of appreciation."

"We may add a word of appreciation for all who have in word or letter expressed their regret for our unhappy experience.

"Since this was written we have recovered most of the stolen goods. Saturday the thief tried to sell them. The dealer was out. The thief waited an hour, then left the goods, saying he would return. He did not. The dealer notified Police Headquarters. They did nothing. Tuesday the dealer notified us that he had some brass which might be ours. We identified and received the property.

For the purpose of bringing two actions, Supreme Court Justice Edward R. Finch yesterday appointed Mrs. Elizabeth T. Davis of the Commodore Hotel, guardian ad litem of her fifteen-year-old daughter. Miss Kendall asserted in her affidavit that her father on December 26, 1918, entered into an agreement with her mother wherein he bound himself, among other things, to pay the mother $500 a month for the child plaintiff's support. This agreement has not been kept, she said.
